A figure dives into water and their body becomes transformed, a refracted and reflected self distorts through the transparent space. Light dances across the form of the swimmer bringing it to life and on the surface of the water. This perceptual flicker, the layering and transformation offer limitless possibilities.

I'm increasingly drawn to these visions, this sense of awe one experiences where one loses oneself and sees something extraordinary in the everyday.

I'm passionate about painting and still feel an enormous excitement about its physical potential. I want to make images, which create the illusion of space and capture the characteristics of these fragments of memory, yet assert the materiality of paint.
