Anthony Frost: Sublime Frequencies

15 October to 5 November

Anthony Frost's paintings are bright, full of colour and expression. They include repeated motifs (chevrons, triangles and circles) and a mix of materials (acrylic, hessian, sail cloth, string and other materials that come to hand).

This hints at a complexity in the work, which at first sight appears quite straightforward. Although each work is planned, there is also a random element, which manifests itself in the creative process: Adding a piece of material or a tie that can change the painting's direction in surprising and unexpected ways.

Frost describes his work as abstract, but his titles and compositions hint the influence of music in his work. He says "I want my exhibitions to be like an album – it's important that I have a title to the show – and the pictures themselves become the tracks on that album"

Anthony Frost, born in 1951 in Cornwall, studied at the Cardiff College of Art (1970-73). He celebrates his sixtieth birthday this year, and can look back at 36 years of exhibitions and a large body of work which is easily identifiable as his own.

From 1975 to date he has exhibited widely throughout the UK, with regular shows in St Ives and London. His most recent shows have been at Beaux Arts, in Cork Street (2008, 2009 & 2010) and at Tate St Ives ('Art Now' in 2008). In late 2010, Anthony Frost's prints were shown at The Armoury in New York with Advanced Graphics.

His work is in a number of corporate, public and private collections including Bank of America, Lloyds TSB, The Nuffield Trust, John Moores, Contemporary Art Society, Whitworth Gallery (Manchester) and Standard Life. In April 2009, Chichester University purchased "Ricochet Man" for the Bishop Otter Collection.

In July 2009 Anthony Frost was awarded "Master of the University" in honour of services to the arts by the Open University, via Plymouth University (College of Art & Design).
